What does DNR do?

Our role is to protect and manage many valuable assets that belong to you. For instance, you, the people of Washington, own more than 5 million acres of land - forests, farms, commercial properties and underwater lands - all of which are managed to provide benefits to you by our department.

Much of this land is dedicated to supporting public institutions like schools and universities. We manage it, selling products like timber and wheat. We manage underwater lands to provide access to the waters of the state - rivers, lakes, streams and Puget Sound. We also work to serve the continuation of navigation and commerce. In 2006, product sales and leases from the lands we manage brought in about $### million.

But managing your lands is only half of our story. We also protect other public resources that belong to you - fish, wildlife, water, etc. - while landowners go about their business. Two of our largest and most important responsibilities in resource protection are fire prevention and suppression and regulating forest practices (or timber harvest).

Aquatic Resources Division

Washington's aquatic lands are rich in diversity and provide many benefits. DNR is steward of about 2.4 million acres of state-owned aquatic lands, including:

- The beds of Puget Sound and the outer coast extending out 3 miles
- 30% of the marine shorelines of Puget Sound; the beds of most navigable freshwater rivers and lake
- 60% of the freshwater shorelines of navigable rivers and lakes.

While aquatic lands offer habitat for species such as oysters, geoduck, eelgrass, kelp and other plants, they also have great commercial, recreational, and aesthetic value. The state Legislature recognized the state aquatic lands as "a finite natural resource of great value and an irreplaceable public heritage." DNR is to manage the aquatic lands on behalf of all people of Washington to achieve a balance of public benefits that include:

- Encouraging direct public use and access;
- Fostering water-dependent uses;
- Ensuring environmental protection;
- Utilizing renewable resources; and
- Generating revenue (when consistent with the other public benefits).

Decisions that Support Sustainable Aquatic Resources

For 150 years, Washington's waters have supported commerce, industry, recreation, and navigation. Piers, docks, and marinas have been built over aquatic lands. Water is the most common and unifying feature of the landscape; it connects uplands to aquatic lands, and aquatic lands to each other. As a result of this connectivity, the activities that take place at one site — whether on land or water — have the potential over time to affect a significant area. Therefore, decisions that affect aquatic lands must take into consideration the potential long-term effects on the larger aquatic ecosystem.

As trustee and steward, DNR makes decisions between sometimes-conflicting interests to achieve a balance of public benefits for the long term — and land-use decisions for activities that affect state-owned aquatic lands and resources. Recognizing this, DNR builds partnerships with agencies, businesses, citizen groups, and the tribes to forge new solutions to old problems.

Safe Debris Burning

Careless burning is the cause of many wildfires and nuisance smoke problems. Smoke can be hazardous to persons with asthma or heart and lung problems. Outdoor debris burning is subject to state and local fire safety and air quality regulations.

PHOTO

- Consider no-burn options. Many landfills offer designated days when yard debris can be disposed of at little or no cost. Your local Washington State University (WSU) Cooperative Extension Office offers "how to" publications and advice about composting. On-site chipping may be feasible. Limbs and other debris may be piled for wildlife habitat if located where they do not pose a fire hazard
- Check local regulations regarding permit requirements and "burn ban" restrictions. Burning is usually regulated by local fire departments. Burning in the undeveloped forested portion of your property is regulated by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR). Contact your local fire department or Fire Marshall for burning regulations in residential areas. In forested areas protected by DNR, debris burning is permitted without a written permit if all of the following conditions are met:
 - Burn one pile at a time of forest debris that is less than 4 feet in diameter (July 1 - October 15) or less than 10 feet in diameter (October 16 - June 30). (Exception: Piles may not exceed 4 feet in diameter at any time of the year in Island, King, Pierce, Kitsap, and San Juan counties).
 - Burn only natural vegetation or untreated wood products.
 - Burn piles are at least 50 feet from structures and 500 feet from any forest slash.
 - Clear the area around the burn pile of any flammable material.
 - The winds are calm or light. It is too windy to burn if trees are swaying, flags are extended, or waves appear on open water.
 - Maintain a connected water hose or at least five gallons of water and a shovel nearby.
 - Attend the fire until it is completely extinguished.
 - Be prepared to extinguish the fire if it becomes a nuisance.
 - Call 1-800-323-BURN to obtain updated burning information on the day of the burn.

If any of these conditions cannot be met, a written DNR burning permit is required. These conditions apply only to burning in areas regulated by DNR.
